Course Description

The larger objective of this course is to contribute to the expansion of human expressive powers by creating and critiquing artifacts that exploit the affordances of the emerging digital medium for the purposes of the ancient human practice of storytelling. Stories are a foundational structure of human cognition and human culture, and a new medium for storytelling offers new possibilities for understanding the world and our relationships to one another. To explore interactive narrative is therefore one way of exploring the boundaries of human understanding and cultural change.

This course focuses on in-depth discussion of two kinds of works: interactive narratives in a wide range of digital and legacy formats, and theoretical works that offer a critical vocabulary for understanding actual and potential traditions of practice. The course will be conducted as a graduate seminar with formal seminar reports and weekly journal responses (which can be in the form of rapid prototypes). Students will also create one major final project that will combine a formal design document with the creation of a theoretically-grounded prototype.

Programmatic Learning Outcomes

- Demonstrate knowledge, comprehension, and application of the tools and formal design elements of digital media design.
- Demonstrate the ability to analyze and critically evaluate existing digital media artifacts, services, and environments using formal knowledge, and to explain and defend one's critical evaluation.
- Demonstrate the ability to devise, design, create, and assess prototypical digital media artifacts, services, or environments and to contextualize them within recognized traditions of practice..

Requirements and Grading

This is a graduate seminar course that provides a scholarly in-depth look at key artifacts and critical texts in interactive narrative design, and that explores the connections between theories of narrative and innovative design.

- 30% Formal Seminar Reports
- 30% Weekly journal posts/rapid prototypes)
- 20% Final project theoretically-informed design documentation, including paper, poster, video, and oral presentation

Assignments

Weekly: a one-page response to texts. Write one paragraph on the assigned digital artifact, one on the assigned critical text, and one on the relationship between them (300 words maximum). If multiple texts or artifacts are assigned, choose one of each to write about.

Seminar Report: an oral/slide presentation (15 minutes, ~10 slides). Prepare a comprehensive oral/slide presentation on either an artifact or a reading assigned for this week. Your report should summarize the key aspects of the artifact/reading that advance our understanding of interactive narrative. You may also present similar texts or artifacts to clarify your points as appropriate. Your presentation should include discussion questions and you should be prepared to led the class discussion as well as to offer your own insight.

We will assign the whole semester's reports by the end of the 2nd week so please think about what you want to focus on, and feel free to propose alternate texts or artifacts that you will take responsibility for presenting.

Final Projects: Working interactive digital narrative, design document, demo video. An original interactive narrative, in digital form, using a platform and delivery environment of your choice. The project should be a complete working prototype that is playable and that supports replay of the same scenario with different experience. It should produce a sense of dramatic agency in the interactor.

Design Document for your Final Project:

1. Executive Summary (paragraph)
2. The theoretical question your project addresses: Who has raised it before and how have they framed it? What is at stake? What will you address? (2-4 pages)
3. The tradition of practice your project draws on: What other artifacts are like the ones you are making? What strategies have they used to create satisfying experiences? How is yours similar or different? Make clear how the tradition of practice is related to the critical question motivating your project. (2 or more pages, with illustrations as appropriate)
4. Evaluation criteria? What are your aesthetics and how will you know whether you have created a successful artifact? (1-2 pages)
5. Screen shots, flow chart (as needed)
6. Brief preliminary evaluation and future plans (1-2 pages)
7. A VIDEO that documents the project with screen captures. It should briefly and persuasively explain the theoretical rationale, and show multiple run-throughs of the final project, demonstrating the value of interaction, and the aesthetic objectives. (1.5-3 minutes)
